NOTES

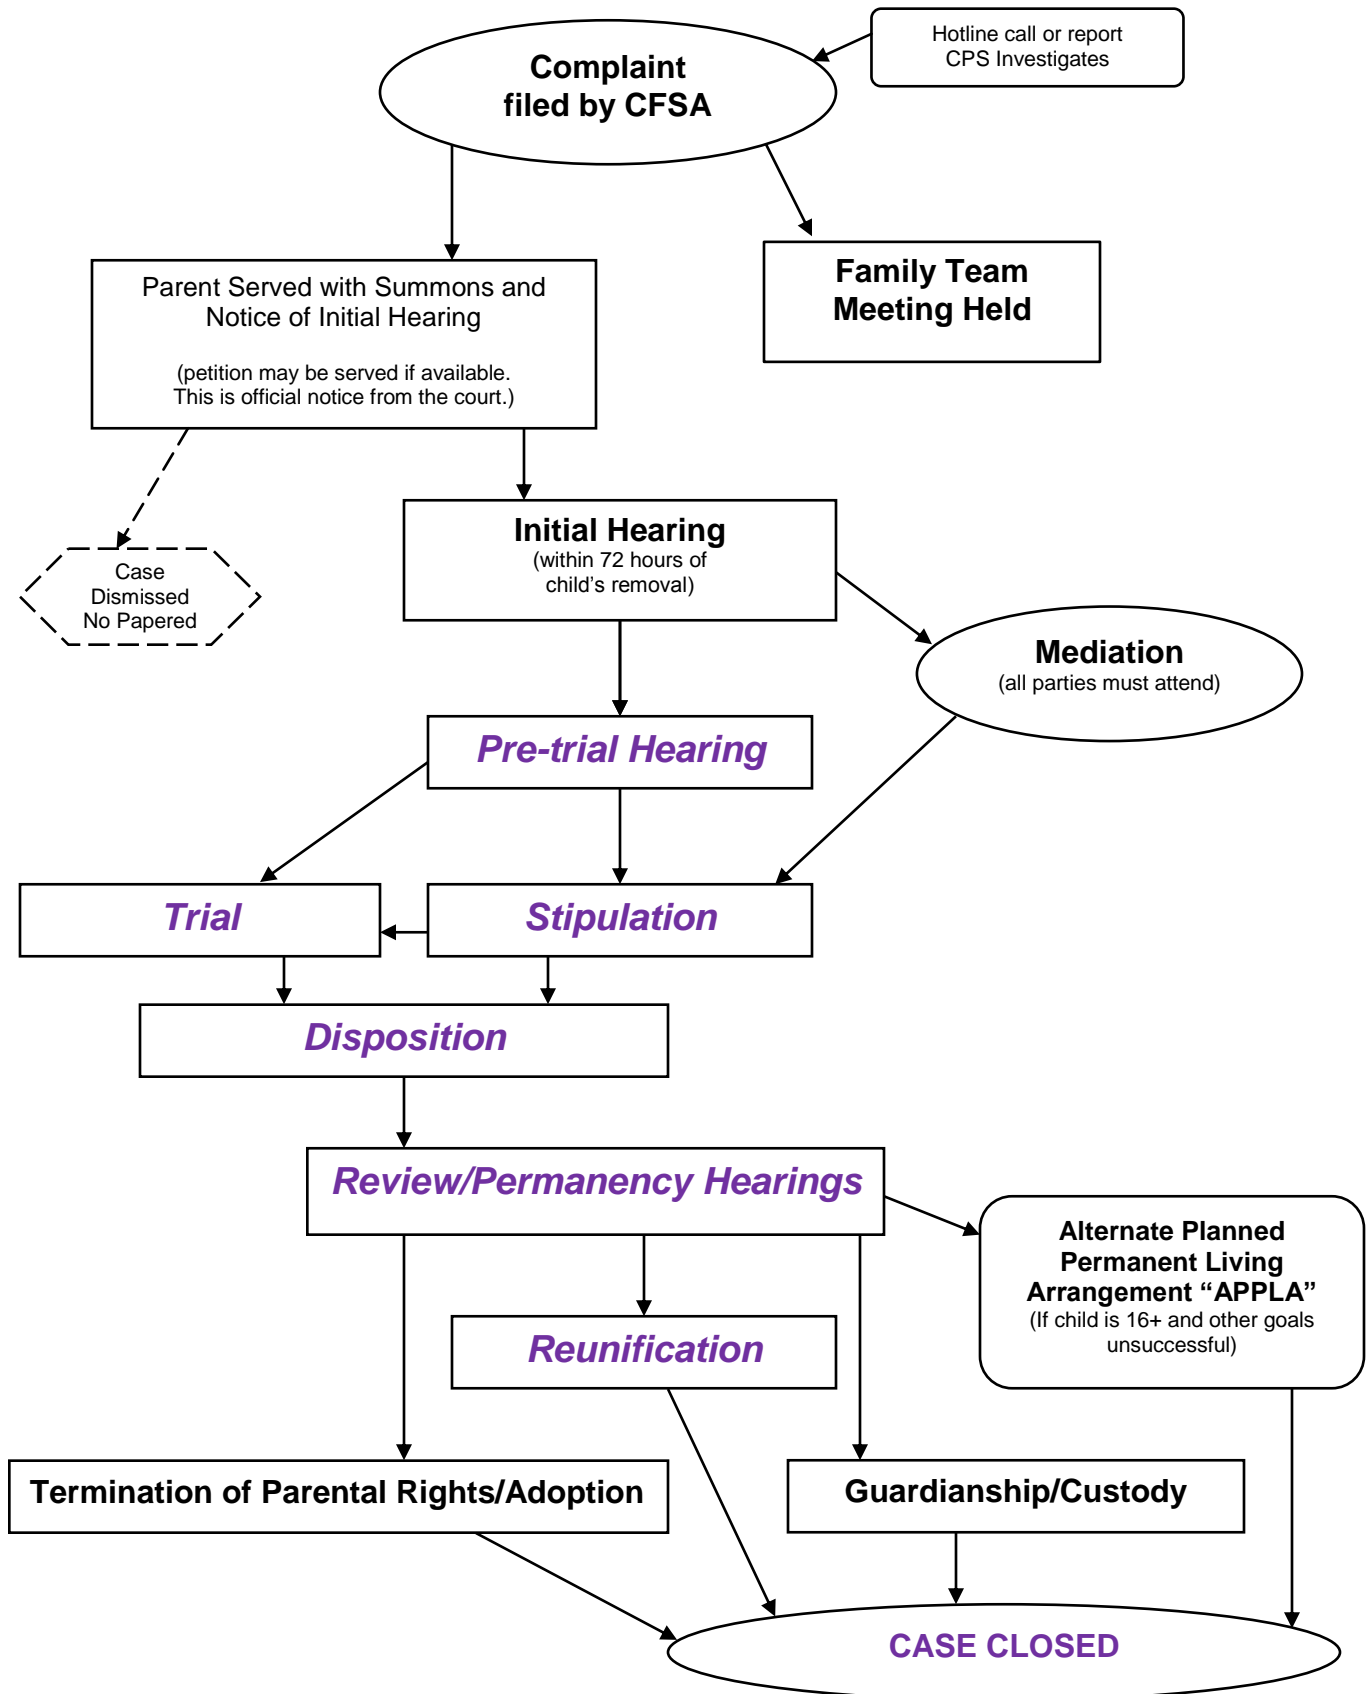

MY CHILDREN AND ME

Use this space for pictures of you with your children.

THE COURT PROCESS

MORE ABOUT THE COURT PROCESS

INITIAL HEARING

This is the first hearing in your case. You will get a copy of the government's petition saying why it thinks your child is neglected or abused. The judge will decide where your child will live until the court can decide if your child is neglected or abused. You may be able to reach an agreement about where your child will live, but the judge will make the final decision.

MEDIATION

You and the other parties and attorneys meet with a mediator to talk about the case in a setting that is less formal than the courtroom. Everyone tries to arrive at an agreement. Discussions during mediation are confidential and cannot be repeated to the judge so parties can speak freely. If you agree that your child was neglected or abused, you can appear before a judge to sign a stipulation admitting neglect or abuse.

PRE-TRIAL HEARING

If you don't sign a paper, called a stipulation, admitting that your child was neglected or abused the court will hold a trial. The pre-trial hearing comes before the trial. The purpose of the pre-trial is to find out if everyone is ready for the trial.

TRIAL

The purpose of the trial is to decide whether your child was neglected or abused. If the judge decides that your child was not neglected or abused the case will be dropped (dismissed). Your child will return to your home without any court supervision. If the judge decides your child was neglected or abused the judge has the right to decide where and with whom your child should live.

DISPOSITION

If the judge finds that your child was neglected or abused he or she will hold a disposition hearing. The judge will decide where your child will be placed and the plan for returning your child to your care.

REVIEW / PERMANENCY

After disposition, the court will schedule another hearing called a "Review" or "Permanency Hearing." Permanency hearings will then take place about every six months or possibly more often. The goal for most cases is to reunite the family if possible. If reunification is not possible, the judge will look at other plans. If you want to regain custody of your child, you must comply with the case plan and all court orders.

WHO WILL BE INVOLVED IN YOUR CASE?

Your Lawyer: You will get a lawyer on the first day your case is in court. To continue receiving free legal services after the initial hearing, you must have a financial eligibility interview in the Counsel for Child Abuse and Neglect Office (CCAN) to find out if you qualify for a free lawyer. The CCAN Office is in Room 4415 on the fourth floor of the courthouse. The hours are Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

The Government Lawyer: The Assistant Attorney General (AAG) is the lawyer for the District of Columbia government. The AAG presents evidence in support of the claim that your child is abused or neglected. You should not speak with the AAG without your attorney present.

Your Child's Guardian Ad Litem: The court appoints a lawyer called a guardian ad litem for your child. Your child's guardian ad litem will talk to and visit your child, explain to your child what is happening in the case, and tell the judge what your child wants. He or she tells the judge what he or she believes would be best for your child. Talk to your lawyer about what you can discuss with the guardian ad litem.

The Social Worker: Part of the social worker's job is to provide services to you and your child and to help you and your family. The social worker also tells the court what he or she thinks should happen in your case and where your child should live. Whatever you tell the social worker can be passed on to the judge. While your case is in Family Court, you may have more than one social worker.

The Judge: Your case will be assigned to a Family Court judge before the first hearing. This judge will usually handle your case until it is completed. The judge makes decisions in your case based on the law and the evidence he or she hears. The judge listens to everyone's input, but the judge makes the final decision.

NOTES

Child Abuse & Neglect

There are many reasons why the government decides it is necessary to remove children from the home. Preventing child abuse and neglect is important to all of us. Knowing what is child abuse and neglect helps parents make sure that their children are safe and protected.

You should consult your attorney for more information about the law. The most common reasons for a child to be considered neglected under D.C. Code Section 16-2301 are:

- ✓ (9)(A)(i): A child who has been abandoned or abused by his or her parent, guardian or custodian, or whose parent, guardian or custodian has failed to make reasonable efforts to prevent the infliction of abuse upon the child. [A reasonable effort to protect the child may be filing a petition for a civil protection order due to violence by another member of the family].
- ✓ (9)(A)(ii): A child who is without parental care or control, subsistence, education as required by law, or other care or control necessary for his or her physical, mental, or emotional health, and the deprivation is not due to lack of financial means of his parent, guardian, or custodian.
- ✓ (9)(A) (iii): A child whose parent, guardian, or custodian is unable to discharge his or her responsibilities to and for the child because of incarceration, hospitalization, or other physical or mental incapacity (this section includes substance abuse).
- ✓ (9)(A)(iv): A child whose parent, guardian, or custodian refuses or is unable to assume the responsibility for the child's care, control, or subsistence and the person or institution which is providing for the child states an intention to discontinue such care.
- ✓ (9)(A)(v): A child who is in imminent danger of being abused and another child living in the same household or under the care of the same parent, guardian, or custodian has been abused.

What is Domestic Violence?

- ✓ Physical Abuse: Hitting, slapping, pushing, punching, kicking, choking, or beating.
- ✓ Verbal Abuse: Degrading remarks, insults, constant criticism, name-calling, yelling, mocking, swearing, and threatening.
- ✓ Sexual Abuse: Forcing sex on an unwilling partner – by physical or verbal threats, demanding sexual acts that victim does not want to perform, degrading treatment.
- ✓ Harassment: Following, embarrassing victim in public, refusing to leave when asked.
- ✓ Economic: Not paying bills, refusing to give victim money, taking victim's money (pay check/benefits), or not letting victim work.
- ✓ Isolation: Making it hard for victim to have friends, not letting victim visit family, monitoring where victim goes and placing limits on time victim may be out of the house, and monitoring phone calls.

Developing a Safety Plan

If your partner has been violent in the past, chances are very good it will happen again, even if your partner promised it wouldn't. For you and your children's safety, it's not safe to remain in a violent relationship. Safe shelter is available to all victims of violence 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Remember, you do not have control over your partner's violence, but you do have control over how you prepare for it and respond to it. Protect yourself and your children through the following:

- Know how to leave your home, the location of the police department, the address and phone number of where you will go if violence occurs.
- Keep all assistance numbers in one location for easy access in an emergency situation and have your purse, car keys, phone numbers, important documents and some cash in a place where you can reach them easily. Keep an extra set of these items with a trusted friend or relative.
- Teach your children how to contact 911 for any unsafe situation, so that if you need to tell them to do so they will know how.
- Do not attempt to stop a violent person from leaving. Attempting to stop the batterer from leaving can be dangerous.
- Press charges for physical violence or threats of violence and follow through with a court order to ensure safety.
- Temporary protection orders and civil protection orders are available through the domestic violence court.
- If you have a protection order, keep a copy with you and let your employer know of any such order.

DEADLINES

The Adoption and Safe Families Act (ASFA) is a law that sets deadlines for parents who want to reunify with their children. The purpose of these deadlines is to make sure that children do not stay in foster care for long periods of time. Children should grow up in permanent and stable families. If you do not meet the court's requirements for reunification by the deadlines, the court may decide you cannot reunify with your child. The judge may decide that your child should be adopted or in the legal custody of someone else. The government or the child's guardian ad litem may file a motion to terminate your parental rights if your child is in foster care beyond the deadlines.

Termination of Parental Rights

If the court finds that your child is abused or neglected, a motion to terminate your parental rights may be filed by the government lawyer or the guardian ad litem. The law requires that a motion to terminate your parental rights must be filed if your child is in foster care for 15 months of the most recent 22 months, unless an exception applies. If the court grants this motion, you will lose all rights to your child.

Your Child's Permanent Placement

The court must set a permanency goal for your child within 14 months of removal from you. If you are not making progress toward reunification, the goal is likely to be permanent placement outside your home through adoption, guardianship, custody or another planned permanent living arrangement. A permanency goal may be set within 30 days if your case falls within an exception involving unusually serious abuse or neglect.

NOTES

TERMS TO KNOW

Adoption – Is when the court decides that your child(ren) will be placed permanently with another family and gives all legal rights and responsibilities for the child to a new parent(s). An adoption may occur by the birth parents' agreeing to give up legal rights to the child and consenting to the adoption by the new parent, or the court can terminate the parents' rights.

Alternate Planned Permanent Living Arrangement (APPLA) – APPLA is a permanency goal for a child when reunification with the parent, adoption, guardianship, and custody are not available options for the young person.

Attorney/Lawyer – A person licensed to practice law and appointed to represent you, your child(ren), or the government.

C.A.S.A. or Court Appointed Special Advocate – A specially trained volunteer from the community appointed to speak to the court on behalf of your child(ren). A CASA volunteer meets with the child, talks to him/her about what the child wants and needs, finds out how the child is feeling about his/her situation, and reports to the court. A CASA may file a written report or come to the court hearing and report directly to the judge.

Case Plan – A case plan is a written report prepared by the social worker, along with the parent(s), that explains what problems your family has experienced, the reason you and your children are involved in court, and what services are needed to help you fix the problems and get the children back home when the goal is reunification.

Disposition – A hearing to determine the resolution of the abuse or neglect case. At that hearing the parties discuss what services are needed for the children and parents to help return the children home safely.

Guardian ad Litem or GAL – A GAL is a lawyer appointed to represent your child(ren). The GAL helps the court decide what is in your children's best interest and also monitors your children in their foster home (and in your home if the children are reunified) to ensure that they are being well cared for and that their needs are being met.

Government Attorney/Lawyer – A person working for the DC government assigned to the case to explain to the court what happened to the child and why the child was removed from your care.

Guardianship – Occurs when the court creates a temporary parental relationship between a child and caretaker (grandparent, aunt, uncle, god parent, other caretaker) that allows the caretaker to take care of the child, provide for all of his/her needs, and make decisions for him/her until you are able to regain custody of the child.

Reasonable Efforts – Attempts made by Child and Family Services Agency (or contract agency) to help parents fix the problems that caused the children to be removed from the home. These efforts may also include services provided directly to the children.

Review Hearing/Permanency Hearing – A hearing to provide the judge with information concerning the progress being made by the parents (or others) to achieve permanency for the child. At that hearing information is provided about every aspect of the child's life and how well he/she is doing in her current placement.

Shelter Care – The temporary placement of a child in a foster home or group home until there is a trial or agreement about whether or not the child is abused or neglected.

Social Worker – The person working for Child and Family Services Agency (or a contract agency working for CFSA) responsible for making certain that your children are well cared for in their placement, that they have proper clothing and receive appropriate medical care and education. The social worker also works with you to ensure that you receive services you need to reunify with your children (such as parenting classes, drug treatment, and therapy).

Stipulation – A document signed by the parent(s) acknowledging that they did something that constitutes neglect or abuse of a child.

Termination of Parental Rights (TPR) – When the court takes away all of a parent's rights to a child and ends the relationship between the parent and the child.

Trial or Fact Finding Hearing – A hearing to determine whether the parent or guardian abused or neglected a child.
