

Rule 115. Practice by Attorneys Not Members of the Bar of the District of Columbia

An attorney who is a member in good standing of the bar of the highest court of any state of the United States, may appear and participate in the Family Court in a particular case by leave of court provided that the attorney has complied with the requirements of District of Columbia Court of Appeals Rule 49(c).